VANCOUVER ISLAND

Whales, wilderness and wine.

On your short and scenic ferry trip to this island of history and romance you may be accompanied by magnificent orcas, playful otters and mischievous gulls. Your destination is one of the most rugged and unspoiled parts of Canada and the home of a new breed of winemakers. The typical Island winery is a family-based operation displaying a passion for turning grapes into good times. The inland Cowichan Valley and southeastern Saanich Peninsula provide a variety of conditions perfect for experimentation and the growing and nurturing of an eclectic array of sought-after labels.

Look for varietals including Ortega, Pinot Gris, Maréchal Foch and Pinot Noir.

GULF ISLANDS

A ferry-tale adventure.

Their names read like wine labels. Salt Spring, Thetis, Saturna, Quadra and Hornby. British Columbia's Gulf Islands lie in the Georgia Strait that separates Vancouver Island from the mainland and are connected by a network of small ferries. The residents reflect a simpler time when help was as near as a neighbour, hopefully one with an unopened bottle and corkscrew. This timeless attitude carries over to the unique varieties of the region; wines that appeal more to the palate than to pretence. This wine-producing region brings tradition, enduring values and passion to the shared pleasures of fine wines and good friends.

Look for varietals including Ortega, Zweigelt, Pinot Gris and Pinot Noir.

FRASER VALLEY

Here's to the rural life.

The Fraser Valley is Vancouver's backyard, a rural paradise stretching for over 150 kilometres from the west coast and one of the world's most spectacular cities. The Valley offers an unforgettable look into a thriving agricultural community. Over half of the province's agricultural activity is centred here and includes vineyards dedicated to some of the most popular and acclaimed wine labels. In the time since the first Fraser Valley winery opened in 1991, local growers have developed and nurtured a region especially suited to early-ripening varietals.

Look for varietals including Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Germanic white grapes.

OKANAGAN
VALLEY

Where the sun comes to play.

The Coastal and Monashee mountain ranges shelter the Okanagan Valley from wet weather and create hot and dry, top-down summers. Long daylight hours lead to prolonged photosynthesis and late ripening while gentle winds and the magnificent Okanagan Lake moderate a harsh winter. The roads connecting the laid-back cities and towns within the area are so full of pleasant surprises as the wines they bring you to, from winners who respect tradition without blindly following it.

The Okanagan Valley is an ever-changing panorama stretching over 250 kilometres across ten distinct sub-regions, each with different soil and climate conditions suited to a growing range of varietals.

Look for varietals from Pinots and Chardonnay to Syrah and Zinfandel.

SIMILKAMEEN
VALLEY

A river runs through it.

The spectacular Similkameen Valley is bordered by steep mountains extending from west of the Okanagan Valley to the United States border. Back in the 1800s, the river running through it gave up gold in eager prospectors. Today the valley's treasure is found in fertile land and a climate perfect for the cultivation of wines as fine as any in the world. The Carlielee Rhodolyte, local tea daytime treat, and tempeh mix crudites that descended with the right. Exceptional varietals are nurtured by rich gravel and silt loam formed from glacial rock.

Look for varietals including Merlot, Gamay Noir, Cabernet Franc, and Chardonnay, along with some very nice Rieslings and Gewürztraminers.

SIP TIPS

LOOK Tip the glass and look both for any shade of sip. Is they age, red wines develop tone. A reddish brown at the edges and whole becomes more golden. Something in a older taste.

SWIRL The most known. The longer we only swirl for a second, while the more can distinguish among thousands. Gently swirl the wine in the glass to aerate the alcohol and release the aromas of the wine. What do you smell? Sugar, cloves, apricot, plum or blueberries?

TASTE The tip of the tongue senses sweetness. The back, sweetness. Anywhere take about acidity. Take a slight amount of the wine in your mouth and work it around to activate your taste buds. Is it tannic, or is it chocolate, like you are eating it as we know wait! Drink the wine instead!

FEEL Feel is the touch of the wine on your tongue. Is it rich, like milk or bubbly? Does it linger at the edges? Tannins, for example, feel dry on the tongue, resulting into a unique word.

SAY The more you can, the more you can do and sooner. And it's like anything and start living to do. Or you appreciate a good the last of the glass and the better the variety you take.

CLOSURE A couple of minutes and observe the palate and clear the way to the next experience.

Keep a lookout for the four tastes of BC wines.

TRIP TIPS

CARRYS Wine and driving roads don't go together. All that tasting can add up to trouble. If your hand is holding the glass, make sure a designated driver is holding the wheel.

CAUTION Some wineries will charge a fee for tastings, especially if you're tasting a lot of wine. Some wineries will waive the fee if you purchase a bottle or case. Some wineries are seasonal – others have shorter hours and they all have one to enjoy your visit.

GIFT Many wineries have wine-related merchandise, many gift shops of wine to enjoy a glass of wine in mind. If you're looking for a gift yourself (why not?), wine glasses make a great choice. Consider wine tours (also known as a bottle of wine) and wine of the year.

LEGEND

BRITISH COLUMBIA WINE INSTITUTE MEMBER

BY APPOINTMENT

Wineries may close seasonally and tasting hours may vary; it is best to confirm operating hours to avoid disappointment.

Two great rewards in life are the sharing of a bottle of fine wine and the discovery of new sights along an open road. Each is a pleasure unto its own. Please don't drink and drive.

LEGEND

BRITISH COLUMBIA WINE INSTITUTE MEMBER

BY APPOINTMENT

Wineries may close seasonally and tasting hours may vary; it is best to confirm operating hours to avoid disappointment.

Two great rewards in life are the sharing of a bottle of fine wine and the discovery of new sights along an open road. Each is a pleasure unto its own. Please don't drink and drive.
